Jaycee Dugard memoir due in July

(AP) — The California woman who was kidnapped as a girl and held captive for 18 years is planning to have her memoirs finished and published by summer.

Simon & Schuster announced Monday that Jaycee Dugard's account of her ordeal will go on sale on July 12.

The book, entitled "A Stolen Life," will cover Dugard's abduction and life with Phillip and Nancy Garrido, the couple who have confessed to her abduction and rape.

Along with hardcover and electronic book editions, the publisher is producing an audio book narrated by Dugard, now age 31.

Since she resurfaced in August 2009, Dugard has maintained her privacy while living in Northern California with her mother and her two daughters fathered by Phillip Garrido.

FARALLON NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE (AP)

— Federal wildlife managers are considering putting rodenticide pellets on the Farallon Islands to rid the wildlife refuge of non-native house mice.

The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service says the mice eat Ashy Storm-petrel eggs and chicks, a species whose numbers have declined to the point where it is listed as a "species of concern."

Maggie Sergio of the animal advocacy group WildCare opposes the plan, saying other creatures will eat the rodenticide, and spread it through the food chain.

Biologists estimate there are several thousand mice on the islands, likely transported by fur traders whose ships docked in the 1800s.
