

Polar Bumble Bee

Polar bumble bees buzz across the tundra, transferring pollen from flower to flower as they feed. They live in cold places, from Arctic Alaska through northern Canadian territories. These fluffy bumble bees keep themselves warm by basking in the sun and shivering their large flight muscles. Pollinators like this bumble bee are important for helping plants, such as berries and fruits, thrive. Help pollinators by planting local flowers.

